

HOME TOURS

DESIGN

TRENDS

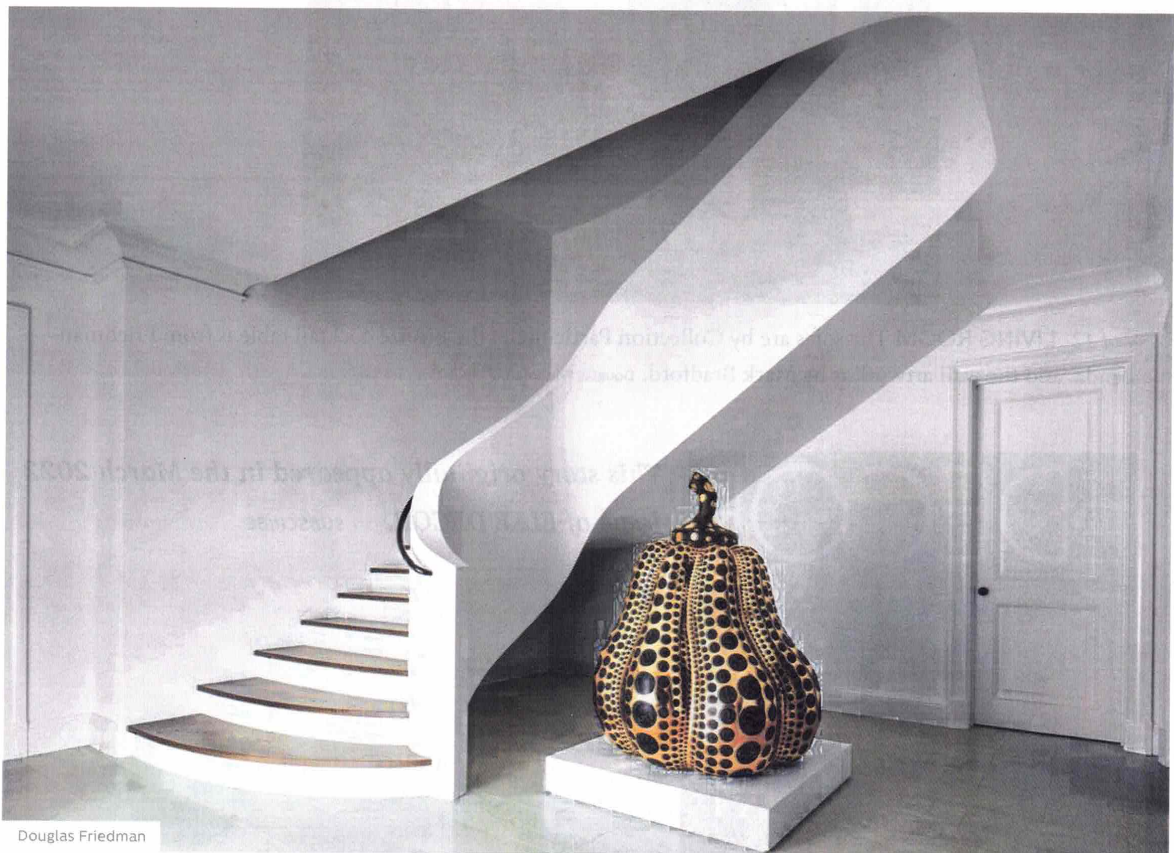

SHOPPING

LIFE AND CULTURE

A SAN FRANCISCO LANDMARK GETS A GUGGENHEIM-WORTHY MAKEOVER

Nicole Hollis brings star power to a storied Tudor Revival home.

By INGRID ABRAMOVITCH FEB 16, 2022

Douglas Friedman

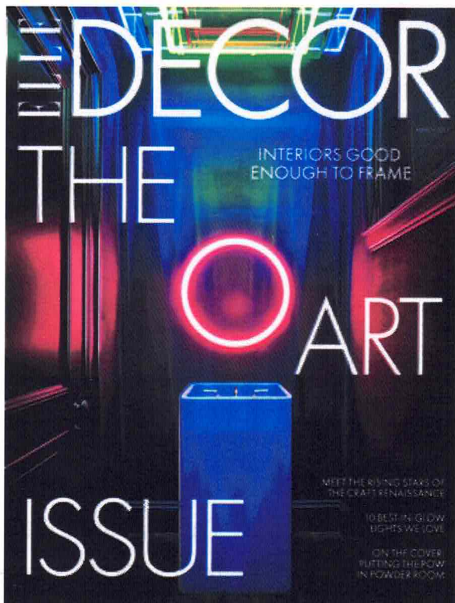

Don't get mad, get even—especially in matters of houses and ex-spouses. That seems to have been the message Mary Alice Huntington hoped to send when, in 1910, fresh off her divorce from her railroad-heir ex-husband, the San Francisco socialite built the architectural equivalent of a revenge dress. The mansion was one of the grandest the city had ever seen, with nine bedrooms over nearly 12,000 square

Mary Alice Huntington, who commissioned the home over a century ago, would likely have approved. Living well, after all, is the best revenge.

GO INSIDE THIS DRAMATICALLY TRANSFORMED SAN FRANCISCO MANSION

9 of 12 PRIMARY BEDROOM The custom bed is upholstered in a Sandra Jordan alpaca, the nightstands are by Mattia Bonetti from David Gill Gallery, and the lamps are by Anne and Vincent Corbière from Twenty First Gallery. The sofa is by Pierre Augustin Rose, the rug is Atelier Février, the pendant is Ayala Serfaty, and the artwork is by Wolfgang Tillmans. Douglas Friedman

This story originally appeared in the March 2022 issue of ELLE DECOR. SUBSCRIBE