Twenty First Gallery|New York

Hubert Le Gall at Twenty First Gallery

Director and founder Renaud Vuillat has had an enviable career gathering twenty years of experience, which began at the Serpette flea market in Paris. Originally specialized in 18th century decorative arts, he instantly became the vital person for a large part of the American market. By 2002, he had quietly created his own line, redesigning historically fashionable pieces into more modern sizes and materials. This fresh angle on his passion took him closer to the artistic process. New York quickly took notice, and he started to live between Manhattan and Paris, selling and consulting, until moving to the city in 2006, where he opened Twenty First Gallery.
