SATURDAY SELECTS

Week of March 2, 2020

by Monica Khemsurov

A weekly Saturday recap to share with you our favorite links, discoveries, exhibitions, and more from the past seven days. This week: a scathing takedown of the millennial aesthetic, the first-ever museum exhibition on ASMR, and oh, a bunch of new design objects, too.

For a show opening this Wednesday at Twenty First Gallery in New York, architect Robert Couturier is curating various vignettes featuring French artists that it exclusively represents in the U.S. Our picks are the stunning lumpy bronze box by Francois Corbeau and the glazed ceramic lamp by Francois Salem.
